Double-hybrid density functional theory with B3LYP calculation. Double-hybrid density functional theory (DHDFT) [M. S. Lee, J. Chem. Phys. 123, 204110 (2005)] was applied to a range of systems where the use of the standard double-hybrid density functional theory (DHDFT) is difficult. A new set of correlation consistent basis sets (cc-pVQZ) for valence electrons and cc-pVTZ for hydrogen atoms were used with basis set superposition error correction (BS-SE-MP2). The applicability of the double-hybrid density functional theory (DHDFT) to a variety of systems was assessed using both double-hybrid B3LYP and triple-hybrid B2PLYP calculation.
