The pair are estimated to be worth up to $1,200 each. “When people realize they are worth $1,200, they just feel robbed,” said Meyers. She says dogs should be declared as an official member of the family. The longtime toy storeowner bought the pair on a recent trip to Europe where they spent several weeks with her son and some cousins. After four years as a puppeteer in a local department store, Meyers decided to hang up her striped stockings and launched a second career as a toy store owner. She says things have changed in recent years. “People have gotten into the idea of buying things for their kids because the economy isn’t great and the price has gone up,” Meyers said. “Now people are looking for things that they can invest their money in, and dogs are a good investment.” Meyers says she loves her son’s new stuffed French bulldog which he picked up for her about a year ago at a local pet store. The French bulldog is a breed of dog that originated in France. There are many different varieties of the breed, including French, Italian, English and American French Bulldog. In some countries, a French bulldog has become a symbol of wealth. "Now he's my little rich man," said Meyers. "So I would say, go ahead and get that French bulldog. It's worth it." You can buy the stuffed French bulldog for $1,400 at Town and Country Toys in Franklin. You can also find both stuffed dogs on eBay where they are selling for more than $1,000. s p r o b o f p i 1cdb36666d
